The Major League Baseball Cardinals announced Monday night that their stadium will host a watch party for Game 7 because of the overwhelming demand from fans to attend the St. Louis Blues watch party at the Enterprise Center. Limited tickets will go on sale Tuesday. The Blues stand a chance to clinch Sunday night's title at home, yet Boston befalls them in a 5-1 Game 6 victory. The city is ready to erupt, as about 50,000 fans took to the streets of downtown St. Louis. This was the Blues' first Stanley Cup final appearance in 49 years, when the Bruins swept them. For this particular team it is even in a position to bring Lord Stanley to St. Louis unlikely. The team started the season 7-9-3, leading to shots of head coach Mike Yeo on 19 Nov and the recruitment of interim head coach Craig Berube. On 3 Jan. 3, the Blues were the worst teams in the NHL at 15-18-4 and 34 points. Rookie goalkeeper Jordan Binnington made his first start 7 Jan, and asylum the team had related to it. Public Relations NHL @PR_NHL Jordan Binnington from @StLouisBlues improved to this 15-9 postseason (2.46 GAA, .913 SV%, 1 SO) to rival a one-year playoff record for victory by the rookie goalkeeper. More #NHLStats: #StanleyCup With @PR_NHL Jordan Binnington from @StLouisBlues be the 14th different rookie goalkeeper in NHL to earn Cup victory and fifth to do so in the development era (since 1967-68). More #NHLStats: #StanleyCup NHL PR, the Bruins hold an all-time record of 15-12 in Game 7s—the most in league history—while league—while The Blues are 9-8. The most relevant, though, is St. Louis' 4-6 record as a away team in such a game compared to Boston's 14-8 record at home. There is still history at stake should Boston prevail, as Wednesday will be the first Game 7 the Bruins have hosted in their 94-year history. The Blues and Bruins are scheduled for 8 p.m. ET starting Wednesday night from Boston's TD Park Grounds.
